ARTICLES & OTHER READING MATERIAL

- Dear Resistance, Marching is Not Enough, via The Guardian: "Marching boosts morale, spreads a message, inspires bystanders, and even gives participants a taste of what it's like to withhold political consent. But it matters most when it's a first step toward other kinds of organizing. There will be no easy progressive victories under Trump, no magic successes just because we speak out. The millions who have marched over the last year and a half are moving in the right direction, but if we want to win, we'll need to do much more than march."

-Those crossing that border, they Indigenous.

-Those babies and children being taken by US officials, they Indigenous.

-Those fleeing their homelands because of state-sponsored terror, they Indigenous.

-Those coerced to travel north because they need to feed/protect/support their families, they Indigenous.

They are my people, no matter the distance.

They are my people, no matter the language.

They are my people.

They are my people.
